SCHOOL WEEK OBSERVED WITH PROGRAM WEDNESDAY

Schools and Clubs Combine to Make Affair One of Interest and Educational Value to Community

One of the most successful meetings ever held here in observance of Public School Week, was held here Wednesday evening. The meeting was held in the auditorium of the McKinley grammar school under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge, the Exchange Club, Kiwanis Club, Lions Club and the Yomecan Club, and the Redwood City Retailers.

The auditorium of the school was well filled by an appreciative audience when the program opened under the chairmanship of Wilbur Doxsee. The program was as follows:

Music.....Sequoia High School Selected Orchestra, led by Max Gelber.
Play.....McKinley School Children
Music.....Sequoia High School Selected Orchestra, led by Max Gelber.
Songs.....The Four Service Clubs
Address ..... Dr. A. C. Roberts
President San Francisco State Teachers' College
"I Love You California".....Audience
Led by Otis M. Carrington

The address of the evening was given by Dr. A. C. Roberts, president of the San Francisco State Teachers' College. Dr. Roberts told of the origin and development of the public school system of the United States and the part it has played and must continue to play in the social and industrial life of the country. The public school has had its greatest growth and development since 1880, said the speaker, today there being enrolled in the elementary schools throughout the United States over 23,000,000 boys and girls. The growth of the high schools, junior colleges and the universities was also covered by Dr. Roberts. The high school expansion really started 40 years ago, he showed. In 1890 there were enrolled only 202,000 boys and girls in the country. In 1900 the number had increased to 519,000; in 1910 to 917,000; in 1920 to 1,800,000, while today the attendance had reached the 5,000,000 mark in 20,000 high schools. The uniformity of the course of study in the high schools of the country was stressed by the speaker, who declared that there are as many adults attending night classes as there are of the younger persons enrolled in the day schools.

The speaker visualized California in the next 30 years as having a population of 20,000,000 persons. Problems of tremendous importance intaking care of this great growth wil confront the people and the solving of these problems will be in the hands of the present younger generation. "We will solve these problems," decalred Dr. Roberts, only if we have good schools. The success of the future of California depends upon our elementary schools."

CHILDREN IN PLAY

The children of the elementary schools pleased the audience with their clever acting. The little play in which they took part portrayed the development of democracy from the earliest time to the present day. The chief characters were Jane Dilge, who was the modern school child, and Anthony Greco, who took the part of Father Time. The play was well carried out and every one of the little actors took his part with almost professional ability. A minuet danced by twelve of the little actors was particularly pleasing.

Just before the play, four little Japanese girls: Yoneko Inouye, Kazuko Yamada, Yuriko Yamada and Mitsuko Hattori, dressed in the picturesque costumes of Japan, sang songs in their own language. They were followed by Yoshiye Ishimoto in a Japanese dance and song.

The program was planned by a committee consisting of A. C. Argo, Eastland Britton, John Gill, Carroll Hall, Norman Menefee and William Curran. The celebration of the week throughout the state was arranged by a committee of which Charles Albert Adams of San Francisco was general chairman and Vaughn MacCaughy, secretary. For the purpose of handling the arrangements most efficiently the state was divided into two sections with the following committees in charge:

Northern Section—Walter L. Bachrodt, Arthur H. Chamberlain, Roy W. Cloud, Will Crocket, Elieas E. Ellison, W. E. Givens, Joseph M. Gwinn, O. S. Hubbard, George C. Jensen, Wesley Kergan.

Southern Section—Robert A. Odell, chairman; John B. Beman, L. E. Chenoweth, A. R. Clifton, Dr. Walter V. Goodfellow, F. A. Henderson, Walter R. Hepner, J. L. House, Jas. T. Montana, Charles E. Teach, W. W. Tritt, William T. Wheeling.

This year marked the eleventh annual observance of Public Schools Week, a week designated to create interest in the activities of the schools of the state and to focus public attention upon the schools. The week was originally instigated by the Grand Lodge of Masons, and at first was a Masonic institution. So much interest was evinced, however, in the work by educational bodies, service clubss, civic organizations and others that the week has for a number of years beens observed as a community affair throughout the state and has gained national significance.

ORCHESTRA AND BAND PLAN ANNUAL CONCERT

By RUDOLPH KALENBORN

Members of the Sequoia band and orchestra will give their third annual concert Friday, May 9, in the Sequoia high school auditorium. As was the case last year, the orchestra will probably play first, with the band performing second and last.

To get used to how the music will sound in the auditorium, the last week of practice will be there, instead of in the music building, where it usually is held, according to Max Gelber, instructor of instrumental music.

A solo piano piece will be played by Victoria Parsons, also a violinist in the orchestra, with the full orchestra accompanying her. There wil be no other solos.

Similar to the first two, the concert is open to the public with an admission charge of 25 cents. Money earned wil lgo to pay for uniforms purchased for the band and instruments to be used by students, but remaining the property of the school.

Ladies Guests At Program of Exchange Club

Interesting Numbers Feature Meeting of Club

The Redwood City Exchange Club held a ladies night Tuesday evening as their regular club meeting. For this occasion an unusually interesting program had been arranged. The chairman of the meeting was Dr. W. B. Langston, who was introduced by Wilbur Doxsee, president of the club.

The program contained many interesting numbers, including readings by Mrs. Arthur Stevens, formerly of Liverpool, daughter-in-law of Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Stevens of this city; a reading by Mrs. John Garland, vocal and marimba solos by Raymond Tinney, accompanied on the piano by Miss Cardoza; and motion pictures of scenes in the Canadian Rockies supplied by W. A. Tuxford, general passenger agent of the Canadian National Railways.

Fish & Game Club Planning Picnic

By J. H. NEUSTADT

Sunday, April 27, promises to be an event of importance to members of the San Mateo County Fish and Game Protective Association.

The picnic and outing to be held from 10 a. m., until evening will take place at Oak Grove Park, on the Crystal Springs Road, and will embrace small bore shooting, racing and other contest for the kiddies, concessions of all kinds, raffles for prizes, sleight of hand tricks and an exhibition worth while.

The admission is free, the parking is ample, the beans and hot coffee will be free, too.

The ladies will not be neglected and those that fail to win prizes can take comfort in dancing and having a good time generally.

Boniface Latham will be on hand to demonstrate that the quickness of his hand deceives the eye, his tricks, his legerdemain, his "Herman the Great" act and other sensationel performances are on the program.

Dr. J. M. Foley has proven his ability so thoroughly as master of ceremonies, that he is qualified to head Barnum and Bailey's circus.

Primo Levenais, the world's champion caster, will give exhibitions.

Dick Fisher may dance a hornpipe, Joe Darcy may deliver the oration of the day, George Dollings may be the concession barker, Al Harding may compete against his own pupils, Fred Ludemann may handle the megaphone, McDonald may tame wildcats, Al Ames may demonstrate his whiskers are grown by machinery and Bruce Gibson, Fred Johnson and others may—but what's the use—they will all be there and either do something or nothing.

SUIT FILED AFTER BOY IS HIT BY CAR

Suit for $25,000 was filed this week against Harry Chew, proprietor of the New Canton Cafe in this city, by Mrs. Ella McCandless, mother of James McCandless, 10-year-old boy, who was struck while riding his bicycle last week by a car driven by Chew. The suit was filed in the superior court of this county. In the complaint it is charged that the boy suffered a concussion of the brain and contusion of the left knee as the result of the accident.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE BY SEQUOIA ALUMNI

Mystery Play To Be Given at Sequoia School Auditorium Tonight by Cast of Former Dramatic Students

Who committed the murder? This is the great mystery that will be solved this evening when the Sequoia Alumni Association presents the side-splitting comedy, "The Haunted House," by Owen Davis in the high school auditorium. Suspicion for the guilt of the crime falls upon a number of the characters in the play, but it is not until the last of the final act that the final clue is unearthed by Ed White (Elmer Steinke).

There is plenty of character acting in the play that will keep the audience in roars of laughter from the time the curtain goes up at 8:15 until the finish. And mystery, you will be held spellbound trying to figure out just what is going to happen and who the guilty person is.

Wednesday afternoon a matinee performance was given for the benefit of the grammar and high school students and the comedy was enjoyed by over 500 boys and girls. All those present at the matinee promised not to reveal any of the secrets or dark plots of the play, so as not to spoil the enjoyment for any of the big audience expected at tonight's performance.

The play is to be given to establish a scholarship by the alumni association for a graduating Sequoia senior. Reserved seats may be obtained at Ryan's Drug Store or at the high school and are 50 cents. There has been a big advance sale of tickets, according to Truman Letts, president of the Alumni Association, but there are still a number of good seats available.

$37,000 Structure To Contain Six Class Rooms

Workmen yesterday began the erection of San Carlos' new elementary school. The contract was let by the school trustees to Young & Horsemeyer, a San Francisco building concern. The plans for the new structure were prepared by the architectural firm of E. L. Norburg of Burlingame.

The building will be located on a 4-acre school site at Chestnut avenue, north of Arroya avenue in the new Koff subdivision. The plumbing and heating systems will be installed by P. E. Brand of Redwood City at a cost of $5,767.

Purchase of the site and construction of the school is made possible by a $30,000 bond issue voted last year, and a $26,000 bond issue by the town of San Carlos for the purchase of the present school, which will be converted into a city hall. This last issue was voted in January.

A sunken rock, which rises only in heavy swells, has been located about 200 yards north of Point Arena Rock, according to word received at the branch hydrgraphic office.

A committee headed by County Surveyor Robert Chandler is considering plans for a scenic foothill boulevard as another artery between San Jose and San Francisco. Tentative plans call for a highway through the foothills of the Santa Cruz Mountain range, linking Fremont road, in Santa Clara County, with the new boulevard extending south on Nineteenth avenue, San Francisco.

George Washington Smith, Fresno's veteran "marrin' justice," may be barred from becoming a candidate for justice of the third township as the result of a new law prohibiting laymen from becoming justices in townships of more than 30,000. Judge Smith has been a justice of the peace in Fresno County for twenty-seven years.

With 18,764 voters registered in Contra Costa County since January 1, according to figures announced at Martinez by County Clerk J. H. Wells, new efforts are being made to roll up a heavy early registration. O. K. Smith, secretary of Contra Costans Associated, sponsoring the registration campaign, states that the total is less than 50 per cent of eligible voters as estimated by his organization and is approximately twothirds of the 1928 registration.

Discovery of a tribe of Indians who speak a language unknown to science, was announced at Los Angeles by Dr. James A. B. Scherer, director of the Southwest Museum. The discovery was made by Dr. A. L. Kroeber, head of the department of anthropology of the University of California on the joint expedition of the museum and the university into northern Mexico. The tribe is the Huarejia, intermediate between the Maya and the Tarahumara. Dr. Kroeber visited the Seri tribe, which is said to be the most primitive in North America. The Seri live on Tiburon Island in the Gulf of California and the adjacent mainland. Surface examination of prehistoric sites and remains made by the expedition indicated that Sinaloa anciently was a last outpost of Central Mexican culture, Dr. Scherer said.

That 1930 will prove the greatest travel year from California to Canada was predicted by E. R. Desbrisay, passenger expert of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Judging from early season records, Desbrisay declared: "Passenger traffic from southern Canada to California has so far this year been heavier than usual, despite depression brought on by the crop depressions of the Northwest. A large increase in paved highways will tend to induce greater motor traffic during the summer months." Two new coastwise ships will enter the company's service this summer on their arrival from English shipyards.

Traffic experts throughout the State are interested in the experiment being conducted at the Hopkins avenue crossing of the Southern Pacific lines at Campbell, Santa Clara County. The railroad company has installed a flashing light signal to warn motorists of approaching trains. This is the first signal of its type to be set up in California, though the signal is generally used throughout the East. The Railroad Commission authorized the installation of the flashing light signal at that point. If it meets all the requirements of the commission this form of safety signal will, eventually, supplant the wigwag signals that have been generally used throughout the State.

Word was received from the office of Secretary of War Hurley to the effect that an additional allotment of $450,000 for construction of the Stockton deep water channel had been made. This makes a total of $975,000 which the government has set aside as immediately available for channel dredging. City Manager Walter B. Hogan expects the federal government to call for additional bids for further dredging shortly.

With an estimated production double that reported when the well first was first brought in last September at 6673 feet, the Standard Oil Company's well No. 81 at Coalinga was brought in again recently, this time at a depth of 7035 feet. Officials said the well would flow 3500 barrels of oil per day and about 85,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

Widening and deepening of the Napa River above Vallejo, as a means to commercial navigation, is seriously considered by the War Department, according to notice issued by Major E. H. Ropes, First California District United States Engineers. Plans call for a channel seventy-five feet wide with four-foot depth at low tide. The width is increased at Jacks and Car Bends and Spreckels and Horseshoe Points.

A new American fighting ship—the sleek grey and red 100,000-ton cruiser Chicago—was launched following colorful christening ceremonies at the Mare Island Navy Yard. One of eight cruisers authorized by Congress eight years ago, the Chicago went into the water while whistles of scores of ships in Mare Island channel sounded lustily and cheers went up from 10,000 throats. The Chicago was christened by Miss Elizabeth Britton of San Francisco, sister of Congressman Fred Britton of Illinois.

With householders and business establishments signing up and requesting natural gas for home and business use, representatives of the Southern California Gas Company, who have been working in the Delano district, believe that this new service will be available in homes there within a short time. Work is already under way on a high-pressure line which will bring gas from a point east of Rio Bravo northerly to Delano by way of Wasco, Shafter and MacFarland. Laying of distribution systems in these towns will begin at the earliest possible date, according to W. C. Cameron, local manager for the company.

San Francisco was named as headquarters for one of the largest motor coach transportation companies in the United States when articles of incorporation were filed in Sacramento with Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan by the Pacific Greyhound Lines Inc. According to Earl A. Bagby, general counsel for Pickwick Stages System and affiliated companies, Pacific Greyhound Lines Inc. will absorb the leading motor coach systems now operating in California. The companies which will be consolidated include the Pickwick Stages System, California Transit Company, Peninsula Rapid Transit Company, Pacific Auto Stages, Golden Gate Stages, Pacific Coast Motor Coach Company, Kern County Transportation Company, Southern Pacific Motor Transport Company and the Calistoga and Clear Lakes Stage Company.

That California, and especially the northern section of the State, is rapidly becoming one of the steel centers of the United States is strikingly shown by the fact that steel, iron, and allied products valued in excess of $1,216,596,000 have been produced here since 1927. Fourteen California steel works and rolling mills in 1929 gave employment to more than 5000 workers whose wages amounted to $7,678,377. The total value of products produced by these plants was in excess of $24,527,552, according to a recent survey made by the State Chamber of Commerce. The value of products produced by the steel, iron and allied groups has been estimated at approximately $405,532,000 yearly since 1927. The growth of steel works and rolling mills in California has been exceedingly rapid and the last two years have witnessed large expansions in northern California involving millions of dollars.

Distance from Dinuba to Visalia Airport would be cut to fourteen miles through a propsed new road, which will be sumbitted to the Tulare County Board of Supervisors, according to County Supervisor T. Wayne Switzer. This road would be an extension of a road running directly south from Dinuba. Right-of-way would have to be condemned through various properties on the southern end of the route. George Smith of Visalia, R. H. Callison of Dinuba and Switzer have been named to make the inspection and report on feasibility of the project. A petition for opening of the road was filed three months ago, but was considered then as a neighborhood convenience. Investigation revealed that Dinuba residents would have to go only fourteen miles to reach Visalia Airport, and that trucking lines would be able to use the new route as a direct entrance into Alta district.

The road has been cleared for reclamation of Islais Creek. Superior Judge Kirk Mahan of Yuba County, overruled the sole objection to the validity of the Islais Creek Reclamation District bonds. William Whittley, owner of a small piece of property in the district, argued that recent fills at the expense of the city had changed the financial setup.

DAVID'S PART ON LIFE'S STAGE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

MONICA'S smile was coaxing as she looked up at the quiet face of the man beside her. "Please tell me what you do, David. Why must you have a secret from me?"

He flushed guiltily. "Surely you can trust me, hon; some day I'll explain it all."

The clear brown eyes clouded. That age-old line: "Trust me." Her brothers had warned her against David Watson, telling her with unpleasant implications in their voices that mysteries were usually sinister. Gambling was one of the things mentioned. David did not work mornings and that looked odd.

"I once read a story about a man of mystery and he turned out to be the town hangman."

David's laugh rang out at this. "I'm not a hangman, Monica. I don't ask you to marry me immediately. Just have faith in me for a short time longer."

"I don't like it. I think I'll stop seeing you until . . . until . . ." she paused. She had intended to tease him into surrender, but it was at that moment that she saw the girl. In her mind the word was in capital letters. The girl was audaciously pretty, although her dress was shabby and her glance at Monica's David was filled with amused recognition. In the brief pause that followed the air seemed tense, mysterious—then with an almost imperceptible wave of a thin hand the girl moved on and David lifted his hat.

"You'd better join your friend," said Monica. "I think she wants you," and she mingled with the crowd of pedestrians who were waiting for the green light at the corner.

He made no effort to detain her, but his face was sober as he, too, was swallowed up by the hurrying mob of workers and shoppers.

"So glad I met you, dear," gushed Monica's sister-in-law, Maud. "I'm on my way to a fitting and I want you to take Sally up to the playroom here," she nodded toward the great department store before which she had paused. "There's a clown there who has a good line and the children are all mad about him."

Sally giggled. "He's terribly funny, Aunt Monica. I wish you'd stay awhile and watch him. He's named Pierrot." Her aunt turned into the store and made her way to an elevator.

"Don't allow Sally to leave the playroom for any reason," ordered Monica tipping the maid in charge.

"The clown, the clown," came in childish shrieks, and smiling at the uproar Monica left to keep an engagement.

At 5:20 she rushed back, wondering if her sister-in-law had called for Sally, whom Monica had forgotten. Only ten minutes before closing time!

The smell of smoke sent a pang of fear to her heart. Her way was barred before she had reached the elevators. "Keep back, madam. No cause for alarm," repeated the floor man suavely. "The store is closing."

"I've got a niece up in the play room," cried Monica wildly, pushing at the figure barring her way.

"The playroom is closed. The store is closing. The smoke is nothing, merely a—" He turned aside, his arm firm against her struggles, and nodded to a clerk who took his place.

The elevators had ceased running when Monica opened her eyes. The smell of smoke was very strong and the air thick with it. She had been carried to the entrance during her faint and was sitting on a stool, her head against a clerk who was dashing water in her face.

"Want me to put you in a taxi?"

Monica struggled to her feet and made a swift dash past the girl. "I've got to get up there. Sally, little Sally, is there!"

A fireman sprang toward her. "Out lady, there's a fire upstairs!"

The air was filled with cries and shrieks of sirens as more fire engines sped up. The faces of the outpouring shoppers were smoke-stained and drawn. Sobs mingled with orders and women fought to get back into the store.

An elevator door clanged and a man's voice rang out: "The last load. Every child is here. Make way!"

An oddly garbed figure with burning eyes stumbled past Monica. In his arms were two small figures and just ahead, almost fainting from fright, tottered the playroom maid with a third child in her arms.

Monica dashed forward. The voice had effectually aroused her and she tore Sally from the sheltering arms.

From a face smeared with white grease-paint burned the eyes of David, his mouth a scarlet gash above the ruffled collar.

"My clown got us all out," Sally was sobbing, "my own dear clown. The firemen told him to go, but he only laughed at them. Auntie, he's burned his hands. Looky!"

"David, David," breathed the girl, totally oblivious of the surging crowd holding Sally firmly with one hand while her left hand sought that of the Pierrot.

He winced as she touched his seared hand. "All the children are out, Monica. I—I didn't mean you to know my occupation." The bizarre mouth twisted in an ironical grimace that hurt the watcher to see, "but I had to take the work I could do, for I had to have money at once."

Belatedly she noticed his injuries and urged him toward the corner and around it. "We'll get a taxi and have your burns treated."

Sally lifted her smoky face. "We didn't get burned. He put big covers over us and wet them at the bubbly fountain. Say, Aunt Monica, I want an ice cream cone."

The incongruous request in the very face of tragedy served to lessen the tension and David turned to his sweetheart. "Are you going to forgive me for the mean part I'm playing on life's stage just now, hon?"

"Forgive," she repeated ashamedly. "I can never make up to you for my doubts. I can't even," a shaky sound intended for a laugh trembled through her white lips, "ask you about that remarkably pretty girl."

"My kid sister, Monica. She ran away from home and I followed to take care of her. Dad was so angry he stopped our money supplies and that's how I happened to be turning my poor talent to account in amusing the children. She is returning to St. Louis tonight and—I need no longer remain incognito."

Women Geographers

The Society of Women Geographers says that for active membership in this organization only those women are eligible who have done distinctive work whereby they have added something to the world's store of knowledge concerning the countries in which they have traveled. Among the members are Delia Akeley, who during her last expedition to Africa assembled a natural history collection of African curios which has been purchased by the Newark museum. Elizabeth Dickey in 1927-28 made extended explorations in Brazil and Venezuela. In 1928-29 she accompanied the expedition to the Maipures rapids, Rio Orinoco, which was led by her husband for the Museum of the American Indian, George Heye foundation, New York. Ruth Crosby Noble is the discoverer of a new species of frog which has been named in her honor "Elentherodactylus Ruthae."—Washington Star.

The Better Part

Apropos of the gossip which linked the name of a famous movie star with that of an oil magnate recently at Palm Beach, Lord Charles Leverholm said at a tea:

"It is not true that they are engaged. The young lady has, I know, refused him ten times. Her attitude is rather that of the beautiful Mlle. Beaumesnil, the famous musical comedy actress who, when an elderly admirer offered her his fortune and his heart, replied:

"'The first half will be enough for me.'"

Forget Enmity in Hunger

The government's "bread line" in Glacier National park has been one of the most popular animal rendezvous in the Rocky mountain region. Here it was that hunger reduced animals of all kinds to a common level; here it was that internecine strife was foregone in the desire to obtain food. Among the patrons of the government table were weasels, mink, crows, blue jays, mountain sheep, deer, bear, magpies and other birds and animals.

Roman Roads in England

Every road map of England shows tiny dotted lines where, in the course of centuries, in spite of the growth of the villages and the fluctuation in importance of the market towns, the old Roman road still exists, sometimes as a mere cart track, and at others merely a line of hedges, still standing as a monument of the busy life which passed away before even William the Conqueror gathered his armies across the Channel.—New York Times.

Demand for Products of Truck Garden and Field

By rights, the vegetarians ought to be the most prosperous and lively cult in this country, and yet you hardly ever hear of a vegetarian any more. They used to hold meetings to denounce carnivorous practices, and they had little restaurants here and there in the larger cities where nut concoctions were made to resemble wiener schnitzels and where the humble lentil appeared in a hundred disguises. It would be hard to find a vegetarian restaurant now, but it is ten times as easy to get tasty vegetables.

The reason is that we have all become vegetarians of a sort. All kinds of figures are available to show that Americans eat more lettuce and less meat. We cry for spinach and are unhappy without our salads. Fresh vegetables abound in the middle of the winter, so that no American need drop them from his diet.

The vegetarian clubs had little to do with the change. What converted us was the vitamin. As soon as we began to worship at the vitamin shrine, vegetarianism came into its own. Eating the fruits of the truck garden because we had to have vitamins, we presently found out that we were eating them because we liked them. Then along came the slender silhouette, and the cry was more vegetables! Vitamins and reducing diets did the trick. Nobody has ever seen a vitamin, but there is magic in the word.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

By GEORGE DORSEY, Ph. D., LL. D.

Men Haters

WHEN a woman says, "I hate that man!" what does she hate him with? Does hate spring from rage impulse which drives us to anger when restrained, or is it the opposite, the detumescence of love? Suppose she says: "I hate lavender"—women do say such things. I heard one say: "I hate Paris." Most women "love" Paris, some "simply adore" it.

I love corned beef and cabbage. Sight or odor of corned beef and cabbage makes my mouth water. My mouth waters only when I am stimulated by something within my food-hunger repertoire. My mouth-water mechanism is made up of glands, muscles, nerves. An adequate stimulus sets it off. Call that activity tumescence (swelling). And note that I may leave the restaurant with a full stomach, and yet the odor of broiled mushrooms as I pass out the door sets my mouth watering again.

I sit down and order broiled mushrooms. The first one I spear has a hair in it. I try again; and encounter a dead fly. These are not pleasant things, but such make or break appetites. I have lost mine for broiled mushrooms, possibly forever. The very thought of mushrooms makes me sick; no mouth-water, no "good feeling" in the food-appetite mechanism. Call that detumescence.

* * *

The sex-appetite mechanism is much more complicated; has more parts, more nerves, is capable of more devastating sensations. Call it the erogenous (love producing) zone. This zone is all in order at birth. By conditioning processes it learns to respond to widely differing stimuli by the time the mature puberty glands begin to send their impulses to satisfy what is by now a definite and specific mate-hunger.

Which means that by the time we reach the marrying age the mate we choose, if any, will be more or less already picked out for us.

"Things and places," says Watson, "tend to become associated with organic responses, specifically those with love." Every object, by virtue of the original bent of the individual, or through conditioned reflex or habit, calls out overt or delayed response in the motor mechanism; also, "a definite and complex group of reflex activity in the erogenous zone."

Excitation in this zone arouses two fundamental kinds of impulses:

(1) Tumescence: rythimical contraction of certain muscular tissue and increased secretions. "If functioning alone, the impulse will lead to positive seeking movements and ultimately to the unfolding of the instinctive reproductive mechanism."

(2) Detumescence: inhibition, and relaxation of other muscular tissue and inhibition of secretions. "These impulses at the motor center, if not inhibited, would release avoidance movements."

Here, then, is the sex-appetite mechanism which early in life begins to sort the little world about into loved ones and those it does not care for. Through the mechanism of habit and reflex functions, objects which at first had no emotional value "come later to arouse faintly or overtly one or other of the two impulses"—tumescence or detumescence.

To the objection that this view over-emphasizes the instinctive factor of love, Watson points out that the love and do-not-love factors are at the bottom of home, general, social and vocational life. We work long hours to improve our position to make more money to carry on home life on a broader scale. "The activities centered about loved ones from infancy to old age are easily the most important factors in life. No wonder that our acts are connected with and evaluated by the connections lying below our language level."

Here again, as always, we come back to that as yet unsolved problem of two faces: the significance and extent of individual inheritance; the degree to which this individual inheritance can be conditioned. Do our original tendencies make us, or our parents and our teachers and our environment? Or, put the question this way: Where does nature leave off and nurture begin? Nature never leaves off—we may be certain of that. Nurture begins at once.

Born with an elaborate mechanism for adjustment, we face three doctors, two nurses, several servants, father, mother, aunts, uncles, etc., all on their toes to adjust for us. Nature never gets a chance. Nurture cries when we do not smile back. To make us smile, they tickle us under the chin and trot us on their knees and bribe us with candy and ribbons and gewgaws.

And so our food appetites, sex appetites, fears and rages slop over into endless things that are not to be eaten or loved, nor to be run from or killed. Indigestion—or adiposity; celibacy—or promiscuity; afraid of shadows, facts, and death; and war on our neighbors instead of against poverty, squalor, and ignorance.

Love and such move the world, move it in many ways because instinctive responses can be and must be conditioned. The conditioned response is our only mechanism for learning to behave like human beings. Love is a driving force of great dynamic power. But such grist as it does grind!

McGRAW TEMPTED FATE TOO OFTEN

Had His Share of Second Base Talent, Now Lacking.

The baseball fates may feel that John McGraw has had his full share of second base talent, and therefore let him continue worrying about the keystone problem. After the great Larry Doyle, McGraw developed Fordham Frank Frisch as a brilliant keystone man. Then he traded Frisch for Rogers Hornsby, meanwhile discarding one of the best of all young prospects in Fresco Thompson, present captain of the Furious Phillies.

The fates were tempted when the Giants let Hornsby go under circumstances still mysterious to most baseball men. Since then the Giants have gone nowhere. McGraw has tried Cohen, Reese, Farrell, and now Eddie Marshall, while Hornsby has helped substantially to make another championship club.

Improved punch, plus the managerial ability of Dan Howley, will boost the Reds, he avers, with only some good pitching needed to make the Phillies step a notch or two higher.

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS

Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

During my twenty-two years as an American League umpire I have worked consecutive shut-out performances, hitless games and extra inning contests. I have officiated in games featured by record breaking strike-outs. Yet none of these performances made the impression on me that a world series game pitched by Herb Pennock in 1923 did. It was a pitching classic as relating to courageous hurling.

In the first place it was the third meeting between the two New York clubs in a world series. The Giants had won both previous clashes, despite the fact that the Yankees got away to a two-game lead in the first meeting. When the two clubs met for the third time, the Giants went into the series a strong favorite. In the two previous series McGraw's pitchers had stopped Ruth, and the Yankees' much vaunted hurling staff had failed to hold the Giants in check.

At this stage of the hostilities Herb Pennock, slim southpaw, looking more like a high school boy than an experienced big leaguer, entered the arena. The first game of the 1923 series was a repetition of other world series games between the two clubs. The Yanks got away to a three-run lead, which the Giants overcame; then the Giants in turn were tied, only to win by a home-run in the ninth by the veteran, Casey Stengel, little considered in doping out the series.

The frail Pennock proved conclusively that a smart southpaw with control could trouble the Giants, all opinion to the contrary. He turned the National League entry back 4-2 and gave the Yanks its first victory since 1921. For in 1922 the best Huggins' team could get was a tie in the five games played.

The sixth game was unquestionably the crucial spot of the series; the Yanks were leading three games to two. The late Miller Huggins entrusted the Yankees hopes in the care of Pennock, despite the fact that he had relieved Shawkey in the eighth inning of the fourth game with the bases filled, stopping a big Giant rally. McGraw's club had to win or pass out of the picture.

Pennock can stand just so much work and no more. It was apparent to me at the start of the sixth game that he was far from right. Working in his third game in five days, two of which he started, had taken its toll. He didn't have his stuff, but he did have his customary control, poise and courage.

In the first inning a home run by Ruth staked Pennock to a one-run lead. He wasn't to hold it long. Three hits in the Giants half evened the count. Two hits gave the Giants a run and sent McGraw's club to the front in the fourth. In the next inning a home run by Frank Snyder, who had not previously made a hit in the series, increased the Giants' margin. In the sixth Frisch's triple, plus a single, added another count.

Throughout the game Pennock had been batted hard by the Giants, much more solidly than the ten hits show. Realizing he didn't have his stuff, Pennock matched wits with every batter, depending on his great control to help him out. As a result he was constantly in trouble. Often with the count three and two he was forced to take a chance and "groove" the next pitch. As a result any number of hard hit drives resulted, but always they seemed to go directly into the hands of a Yankee fielder.

Yet, during all the bombardment, all the tough breaks, Pennock never once faltered. It is easy to pitch when you are out in front, but to keep giving your best when your stuff is being batted hard, is another matter.

The break of the game came in the eighth inning, when Nehf, who had held the Yanks to two hits, suddenly lost control. After allowing two hits he passed the next two men on eight pitched balls. That was enough for Nehf, thought McGraw. He was relieved by Ryan, who also was wild. Before the inning was over the Yankees had made five runs, enough to win the game 6 to 4 and capture the series.

Pennock's pitching in the sixth and deciding game of the 1923 world series will always stand out as the most courageous, the greatest pitching performance I have ever seen. He came from behind to win after being apparently out of the running.

Harmony of Life

Of late it has become increasingly noticeable that some men are apparently rushing through life and packing into the space of a few hectic years their earthly experience, thereby realizing but very little of the rare beauties of life. It may be that they are actuated by a desire to accumulate a fortune quickly. It may be that business or professional competition makes it imperative for them to strain every faculty in seeking to reach the goal. Whatever the cause of their mad haste they are assuming a grave risk.

Rest is necessary—relaxation is imperative — and he who refuses or fails to take these precautions sooner or later breaks under the strain and perhaps leaves this sphere long before the expiration of man's allotted time as recorded in Holy Writ. The sensible man is temperate in all things. He realizes the value of a sound constitution, a clear mind. He knows that his success does not depend so much upon sudden spurts of superhuman energy, with its inevitable reaction of exhaustion, but upon a steady, normal performance, carefully systematized, which in the end produces maximum results.

But many men in the business and professional world today are going to extremes. Many of them are overlooking the real significance of life. How many human keels are properly balanced? Men rush or they lag; they either overproduce or hamper the wheels of endeavor. They burn out their human machinery or stagnate with inactivity. In their earthly experience there is no rational medium.

Life was never meant to be lived on the basis, for if we are to believe the admonitions contained in the Book of Life we must realize that man has his rightful place in the universe. His work is allotted to him and he is perfectly equipped to perform his duty, leisurely, but with thoroughness and efficiency. No task is too hard, no burden too great, no time too short for the man whose thinking and acting reflect the laws of that unchanging, harmonious and intelligent Power Who holds in His hand the nations of the world.

Life after all is to be lived, not rushed through in mad haste or dragged out in pitiable helplessness. Let us, by all means, take time to enjoy the beauties of this world and especially at this season of the year when Nature's handiwork is beautifully and systematically unfolding. And let our duties (if this it at all possible) be performed in such a uniform manner that there will be no mad rush to "catch up" or, on the other hand, days of comparative inactivity to attest a needless haste

Albert Pike, the great Masonic philosopher, has written: "The laws which control and regulate the Universe of God are those of motion and harmony." And what is harmony but peace and tranquillity, the absence of worry, fatigue or a sense of self-reproach at having failed to perform one's duties efficiently. "Life is the wonderful creation of God," and as such our human experiences should reflect those attributes of regularity, those fixed, steady and harmonious principles that govern His universe.

One continually is hearing stories about the fabulous accumulation of money through some brilliant scheme or lucky break but there are no financial fairy tales more absorbing than those based on the wizardry of compound interest. The piling up process may seem slow and prosaic enough at first but as time goes on we catch the spirit of the magic spell.

Thrift in theory is a dry subject but when it comes into our lives, enriching our hopes and giving point and purpose to methodical routine, we feel in it a tense and ever growing fascination.

"Every home needs a garden," says the president of the Ontario Horticultural Society. If he can sell this idea to the boys and girls, there will be a marked change in the countryside.

Fascination of Thrift

By S. W. STRAUS,
President American Society for Thrift

On August 16, 1819, a deposit of $10 was made in a New York savings bank. On the 26th of the same month the next year a deposit of $5 was made. No other deposits have ever been made for this account. The original depositor never returned to claim his money. The account still stands but through the processes of compound interest it has grown to more than $2700 or 180 times its original value.

An office boy on an errand lost merchandise worth $110. Ten years later the boy found himself able to make restitution although it was not compulsory. He gave $110 to the man whose merchandise he had lost. The amount really lost, however, was $198.67 for that is what the $110 would have become had it been invested at 6% compounded semannually. In fact, if the office boy had waited one year and 263 days longer it would have been necessary for him to return $220 if he had taken into consideration the compound interest which the $110 had earned.

The attention of the writer recently was called to the illustration of a Roman child's bank 1900 years old with this explanation: "One cent saved in this bank and kept at 3% interest compounded annually until now would amount to twenty-four sextillion dollars — $24,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 — more money than there is in the world."

If you can save $90 a month during the next twenty-five years and invest the income at 6% compounded semi-annually you can then retire with $61,975.

Wild Flower Savers

Save-the-wildflower activities are always timely, but particularly in the Spring, when human beings make their first joyous rush to woods and fields.

Nowadays, children are among the most ardent conservationists. They have learned through camp fire and scout work and through nature study at school to appreciate birds and wildflowers and to enjoy them without destroying them. They go outdoors armed with pocket flower or bird guides and binoculars and microscopes instead of baskets or slingshots.

Wouldn't it be fine if the youngsters could educate their elders in this matter?

Trusting Strangers

The merest glance at the news of the day must convince one of the amazing fact that some people who have worked hard to make and save money are willing to entrust it to people about whom they know nothing, for projects which cannot bear inspection.

There are many men in every community capable of giving sound advice on the investment of savings; yet almost continually one hears of money being given to smooth-spoken strangers who offer marvelous returns.

Should Be Book Lovers

The habit of reading worthwhile books is one of the most valuable habits children can form. Cheap trash and the so-called thrillers are objectionable, as children possess a very impressionable nature and are not critical in their reading.

Good books inspire high ideals; give food for wholesome thought and remove to some extent that urge to be "always-on-the-go."

Anything that tends to keep children in and around the home merits particular attention.

Love In Home Smooths Pathway

The point to remember is that love, the greatest thing in the world and the factor that binds homes together, does not occupy its proper place in many family circles. Half one's life is lived in the home. Hence there, above all other places, love should find an abiding resting place. If so, there would be fewer tragedies in the world.

The fact is that the preponderance of jazz records played on phonograph programs is a strong commentary upon the need of a better system of radio control. We are not getting enough entertainment by the present system, it had better be a public monopoly than a private one.

Television Is Demonstrated By Bell Company

Two-way television, to supplement the usual two-way telephone, permitting parties to see as well as hear each other, was demonstrated a few days ago in New York by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., according to advice received this week by Manager L. C. Brown of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

An experimental service between the telephone company's building at 195 Broadway and the Bell Telephone Laboratories at 463 West street, which has been in operation for some time, was disclosed and demonstrated to representatives of the press.

Following the demonstration, statements were made by Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Co., and Frank B. Jewett, vice president of the company and president of the Bell Laboratories.

Mr. Gifford said, in part:

"The demonstration today by Bell Telephone Laboratories, of simultaneous two-way television and speech, shows some of the results obtained from our continued work in the television field. At the time of the initial demonstration of television by the American Company, in April 1927, it was stated that we would continue oud work in television. Partial results of this work were shown in the demonstration of our out-of-door television in 1928, and of color television in June 1929.

"The equipment which has been installed for operation over telephone wires between our buildings in West street and in Broadway, shows what it is possible to do technically in the present state of the art in eliminating the element of distance as affetcing sight and sound in the matter of telephone conversations. This can be accomplished over any distance where suitable telephone channels, either wire or radio are available.

"While substantial progress has been made on the technical side, the future commercial possibilities of television are still uncertain. In line with our policy of exploring and developing every field which gives promise of possible improvements in and extension of electrical communication, we expect to continue our work in television."

8,000,000 Set As State's Quota In U. S. Census Count

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, April 17—(UP)—Uncle Sam's 1930 census, just completed, will show California with a population in excess of 6,000,000, and Redwood City in the neighborhood of 10,000.

Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan made the estimate here this week in the 1930 edition of the California Official Roster, which contains the names of all city, county, state and federal officers.

"Population increases by an excess of births over deaths, by immigragration or by an excess of arrivals over departures," said Jordan. California's growth has been the result of a combination of these factors ever since the Spanish padres established the wonderful series of missions in the territory that is now the Golden State.

"A study of the population movement during the last 21 years shows that there has been migration away from the mountainous mining counties toward the fertile valleys, and that, although the original thousands came with the gold rush, agriculture has now superseded mining."

"Thousands of tourists visit California annually," Jordan said, and records show an average of approximately 10,000 persons per month remain to make their homes here. Between the censuses of 1910 and 1920 the population of California increased more than 44 per cent and it now stands eighth in rank among states of the union.

According to an estimate by the State Department of Finance, if the same growth continues, California will have a population in excess of 13,000,000 in 1950.

"During the last 20 years the excess of births over deaths in California has been approximately 250,000," said Jordan.

"This is a normal increase, and it takes only a very severe epidemic, such as that of the 'flu' in 1918, to cut down this lead. In that year there were some 1,700 more deaths than births in California, but in the following year the stork got his stride again and births exceeded deaths by approximately 10,000."

Police to Study Crime Detection

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, April21—(UP)—Redwood City's police will soon be going to school.

Instead of readin', writin' and 'rithmetic, they will be trained in the highly scientific art of catching criminals.

The 1929 legislature, according to James A. Johnston, chief of the State Department of Penology, amended the law to permit the state Bureau of Criminal Identification to arrange for organization of police schools.

In preparation for such schools, the bureau's board of managers have drafted a tentative course of study designed to be of great practical value, not only to local police departments, but also to sheriffs of the state and their deputies.

The course includes four divisions, as follows:

1. Criminal Law and Procedure—general principles of criminal law, state and federal laws, laws of arrest, rules of evidence.

2. Police Organization and Administration—California state constitution, powers and limitations, distribution of the force, crime prevention.

3. Criminal Identification— Fingerprinting, handwriting, photogphing and microscopy, portrait parle, modus operandi and ballistics.

4. Criminal Investigation— The investigator, inspection of scene of crime, finger and footprints, blood stains and other scientific evidence.

Already the city of San Francisco has opened its "school" for police, which is under the supervision of Sergeant Patrick McGee. Police officers from other California cities are attending to learn "the latest in methods of catching criminals.

The school opens every day at 9 a. m. with the regular daily 'showup'" says Johnston. "This includes every prisoner arrested by police during the preceding 24 hours. Following the showup there are four lectures, 15 minutes each, in order that they may cover as many subjects as possible in a period of a 6-day week.

There are 15 men, detectives and police officers assigned from the department to the school each week, in addition to visiting chiefs and officers from surrounding Bay cities, bringing the average daily attendance to 20 a day."

Acting as "Professor," Sergeant McGee puts the men through an intensive course on handling firearms, disarming desperadoes and subduing criminals who "fight back." In addition to the physical tricks an officer must know, McGee has the heads of the various details give brief lectures on the topics outlined above.

Similar schools, it is planned, will be established by cities in central and southern California in the near future.

Old Council Meet In Last Session

Last Monday evening the members of the city council met and transacted routine business closing up all the work of the council before handing over the reins of city government to the incoming council. The old members sang their swan song and retired.

On the suggestion of Walker the Arts Guild of Stanford Park, Merner and Lemos, owners, was tendered a vote of thanks in bringing the institution to Menlo Park.

Treasurer Ryan, in a letter to the council, asked for information regarding the legality of the bill amounting to $100 for fees for the city attorney in representing the council in the injunction suit brought by the property owners of Stanford Park and passed last week by the council. Attorney Whitworth defended his claim showing by an ordinance of the board that he was entitled to extra compensation for the additional work. The council directed the treasurer to sign the warrant.

The claim of $250 presented by Chief Furman on behalf of Paul McCarthy, the attorney who defended the chief in the damage suit brought against him for damages in the sum of $10,000 for alleged false imprisonment by J. J. Furnival and which was won by Furman, caused much discussion. Weeden and Dale refused to sign the claim. Weeden held that it was illegal, that the bondsmen of the chief should be the responsible parties. He also contended that the council ought to have been consulted concerning the case and that perhaps the city attorney could have defended the suit for much less money. The city attorney was in doubt as to its legality but held that such claims were allowed in other states and in some instances in California. The only question to be considered was Furman prejudiced in his purpose in making the arrest. If he was not, then the claim was a legal one. On motion of Blake, seconded by Walker, the bill was allowed.

Before retiring in a neat speech, Mayor Ellis congratulated the members of the new council, pledging them his support. He wanted the city to go ahead and intended to spend the remainder of his years here. Walker followed in a similar strain handing his badge over to the secretary and also a pass key to the city hall, saying that he had paid 25 cents for it but would donate that amount to the new council. He also displayed a deputy sheriff's badge, so that while he lost one job, he was given another. He, too, is to remain in Menlo Park the rest of his life. The council then adjourned sine die.

Mrs. Kurtz, clerk, then swore in the three new members, E. J. Crane, W. E. Dale and Alfred H. Anderson. After calling the council to order the new members got down to work. On motion of Crane, seconded by Anderson, W. H. Weeden was chosen chairman and on taking his seat was loudly applauded by the crowd that jammed the meeting place. Weeden in a neat address thanked the members for the honor and pledged his co-operation in carrying out a program for the advancement of the city they all loved so well. He said the owners of property in Stanford Park would be given every consideration in street work improvement.

The chair then announced the following committees:

E. J. Crane, police commissioner; Health and Safety, Blake; Light and Power, Dale; Street and Parks, Anderson; Finance, Weeden.

Dale presented a resolution declaring the office of chief of police and the positions of police officers vacant, said resolution to take effect immediately and naming Frank Love of Stanford Park, chief. The resolution was seconded by Crane, and on roll call received a unanimous vote. No time was lost in filling the vacancies. Love was called for and sworn in and in turn he presented the name of Philip Blanchard to be one of his assistants, and the appointment was immediately ratified by the council.

Crane offered a resolution declaring the office of city judge vacant and it went through without a dissenting voice. David Patrick was immediately appointed to fill the vacancy and was sworn in. W. E. Weeden was given a temporary appointment as building inspector. Blake suggested that hereafter the meeting of the council be held in the new auditorium of the grammar school. That it could be rented for $2.50 a meeting. The chair appointed Dale and Anderson to look into the matter.

Mrs. F. S. Tupper, president of the P.-T. A. wanted to know through the chair as to the protection that was to be afforded the grammar school children. The officer deposed, William Feeley, had given splendid satisfaction as he was kind to the little ones and had gained their confidence. Weeden firmly told her that ample protection would be given the children and that there would be no worry on that score.

The new city judge, David Patrick, is a resident of Stanford Park, where he has a home and has been residing for some time. The young man is an instructor at Stanford and is a graduate of the State University of Iowa and holds his master's degree from Stanford, where he is an instructor in English. His father was an instructor at Yale. The new judge served over seas during the late war and was connected with the judge advocate's office. Mr. Patrick is a young man of splendid mien with an attractive personality and possessing a fine ability that will assure his success as an official. The university gladly gave its consent for him to accept the office.

The new chief, Frank Love, is a contractor and has resided in Menlo Park for a number of years. He served in Siberia during the World War and was chief traffic officer at Camp Fremont showing wonderful ability in the position. He is a prominent Boy Scout worker.

Philip Blanchard is a native of Menlo Park and a prominent Native Son.

Spring Activities

A Visitor from Honolulu

Mrs. William Meyer, formerly Miss L. Carter, is here from Honolulu on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Melbourne Carter. Mrs. Meyer will return to her island home in a few weeks.

Program to Mark Irish Insurrection

Marking the fourteenth anniversary of the Irish insurrection of 1916, a program of literary and musical exercises will be held in Mission Turn Verin Hall in San Francisco. The orator of the occasion is to be Matthew A. McCollough, a former Menlo Park resident. Mr. McCollough is an attorney and a speaker of more than ordinary ability.

High Honors Conferred On Two Former Menlo Park Priests

High honors in the Catholic church were conferred on two former Menlo Park priests by Pope Pius II, according to word received from Vatican City during the week. Rev. John W. Sullivan, a former instructor at St. Patrick's Seminary and pastor of Mission Dolores Church in San Francisco, was appointed a monsignor. Rev. George Lacombe, at one time assistant pastor here and for several years a research scholar in Paris, was also made a monsignor. Father Lacombe while here graduated from the Romanic language department at Stanford. He is engaged in translating some of the old records of the church that is to bring him fame. His book when finished will be the first of its kind ever published, containing scriptural passages hitherto unknown. It will bring the young priest fame and fortune.

Large Class from St. Patrick's Seminary Will Graduate

St. Patrick's Seminary will have for ordination the largest class in the history of the institution next June. Fifteen young men will be raised to the priesthood, the greater number of whom have been students in the seminary for the past eleven years. Last year ten seminarians were ordained. The young men to be ordained are to be placed in various parishes of the diocese as assistants and in time are to become pastors.

The beautiful oak grove in the White estate on Oak Grove avenue is the finest in the county, and for that matter in the state. These giant monarchs were irrigated and cultivated last summer and this spring the aborculturist scientifically treated the trees bring out their hidden beauty and attractiveness.

New City Council Meet Tuesday Evening

The new city council met in regular session Tuesday evening. All members were present.

All bids for street improvement at Stanford Park presented some ago were rejected. The proceedings for this work under resolution No. 29-1 was begun on November 26 last were dismissed and a notice was ordered posted by the clerk. The motion to dismiss was made by Dale, seconded by Anderson. Attorney David of Palo Alto, who represented Mr. Hoag, one of the protestants in the matter, said that an injunction suit started a few days ago would be dismissed at once. Thus came to a close a vexatious question of street improvement that was a big factor in the last municipal campaign.

Chairman Weeden explained that a new plan of street improvement in Stanford Park would be considered soon. It would be sponsored by the Stanford Park Improvement Association.

Chief of Police Love presented the name of Frank M. Lintner for the position of police officer for ratification by the council. Lintner was immediately approved by the members. Lintner is owner of the Peninsula Pigeon Farm on San Mateo Drive and has been a resident of Menlo Park since 1923. He is a tall, handsome man, with all the qualifications necessary to make a one hundred percent official.

Following the passing of claims, the council adjourned to April 29.

Menlo May Have New Postoffice Building

President Hoover has recommended to congress that an appropriation be made in the sum of $210,000 for a new postoffice at Palo Alto, his home. This amount will be set aside for that purpose. Senator Shortridge is about to introduce a bill in congress for an appropriation for a postoffice building in Menlo Park, not to cost so much, but a sum sufficient to erect a cosy office structure for Barney Larrecou, the popular postmaster.

Miss Gertrude Cashman, who is attending a dietetic school in San Francisco, visited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Cashman on Jeter street, over the week-end.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1929-30 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright, 1929, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 27

The following remarks of a very well known player on the "luck of the game" are most interesting:

"I think Chance and Luck, as they affect the Bridge player, are a most fascinating subject, because you can never get to the bottom of it.

"You can never definitely prove anything.

"We know that Auction Bridge is a game of skill and chance combined. The finest player on earth cannot beat the cards. The utmost advantage that the best player has over the worst is certainly under twenty per cent. It is more likely ten or perhaps fifteen per cent. This is, of course, an ample margin to make it certain that the best player will win in the long run.

"I know a very fine player who, after five years during which he won consistently, has since had three losing years, and is, up to date, down on his fourth.

"That is, I imagine, distinctly unusual. My experience is that most good players, who play regularly, win on balance in the course of twelve months; and I know some who never admit having had a losing year, although they may have had long weeks or months of misfortune.

"But the fallacy of most people who dogmatize glibly about the cards averaging themselves out, is that there are other factors which have to be taken in account. The best player is helpless in the hands of a bad partner rubber after rubber. Of course, you may say it is impossible, and that, like the cards, you will get your fair share of good partners in the course of a year. But you can't prove it.

"Then, again, you may happen to strike good partners just at the period when they are in bad luck, and you derive no benefit from their superior play. And it may easily fall out that you get your good cards at the wrong time, or when your partner is holding a succession of Yarboroughs. Good cards can often be very expensive. Every bid — except in the case of cast-iron hands — is made on the assumption that your partner holds something, probably at least two tricks. You may call perfectly soundly, and even cautiously, but if you keep on finding your partner with nothing in his hand, you are bound to go down.

"Or you may hit a run when the cards you and your partner hold do not fit. You make a good Spade call and find your partner with none, or only one, and the hand that looked a possible game winner proves worth only the odd.

"You may have a genuine No-Trumper, and your partner may put you down a good hand. But the cards do not 'fit', and you miss game. Or you may happen upon a series of freak hands, when, if you call high with a suit of seven or eight, you find all the remaining trumps massed in one hand against you.

"It is the sense of this mysterious factor in cards that makes players superstitious. The idea involved in it is that some men are lucky by nature, others unlucky; that such and such times and seasons are lucky and unlucky; that the progress of events may be modified by the lucky or unlucky influence of actions in no way relating to others — as, for instance, that success or failure may be affected by the choice of a seat, or by turning round thrice in a seat.

"It is this belief in luck as something which can be relied on, or propitiated, or influenced by such and such practices, that is shown, by reason and experience alike, to be inconsistent not only with facts but with possibility. The moral of this sermonette is that the Bridge player never should get unduly elated by temporary success, nor get depressed by temporary disaster.

"I don't believe there is any magical system whereby you can attract good cards or good luck. But I am certain that if a player gets his 'tail down' thoroughly and believes that Fate is against him, he is inviting disaster."

WRITES FROM CHICAGO

Mrs. C. E. Pulcipher, a former resident of Redwood City, and now living in Chicago, is still a lover of California's balmy climes, and occasionally sends us clippings from the "windy city" showing "how goes the weather there." Her latest clippings show the blizzards which paralyzed traffic in Chicago last month. Californians can best appreciate their own blessings by seeing what other folks have to put up with.

Pleasant Rest and Recreation Rooms Provided For Telephone Switchboard Operators' Benefit

By RICHARD STORRS COE

WHAT to do after lunch until it's time to go back to work, is one of the minor problems of business life. Some stroll aimlessly through stores or "window-shop," if the weather is good; others take the opportunity to write a letter or snatch a few minutes of reading, provided a quiet place can be found.

For telephone operators, however, the problem practically solves itself. In all the buildings operated by the large telephone companies throughout the country some space is provided for the personal use of the operators. Pleasant sitting-rooms are made available where they may spend their time after lunch and during the fifteen-minute rest periods which they enjoy twice a day.

Telephone service, of course, has to be continuous, so the girls take their lunches and rest periods in groups, only a part of the operators being off duty at any given time. The sitting rooms, therefore, are in use by one group after another for a large part of the day. Any one girl is there for only a short while, but the room is in service most of the time. At night, too, and in stormy weather these rooms are especially appreciated as a cozy spot for operators off duty.

Cozy they are, indeed, with their inviting atmosphere—attractively furnished with comfortable settees, chairs and lounges, gay curtains in the windows, shaded lamps and tasteful carpets or rugs. Pictures hang on the walls and there are desks and tables where one may scribble a note and telephones convenient for use.

In many of the sitting-rooms phonographs or pianos are provided and dancing is a popular pas time. Magazines are generally available and often books as well. The telephone companies frequently arrange to have a branch of the local public library established in the operators' sitting-room, so that the supply of books is changed at intervals, and the books may be borrowed and taken home as well as read on the premises. And nothing, perhaps, adds a more home-like touch to a room than a well stocked bookcase.

All the furnishings and equipment in these rooms are supplied by the telephone companies, including facilities for games which are much enjoyed.

In the larger buildings personnel assistants, under the supervision of the head of the telephone traffic force, are in charge of the sitting-rooms. They introduce the girls to one another, direct the new girls where to leave their hats and coats, and help to make them feel that the room is theirs and that they are welcome to make use of it whenever they are off duty.

Locker-rooms are also provided, in which each girl has an individual compartment where she can keep her hat, purse, etc. Coats are hung in larger compartments which are shared by several operators. Umbrella racks in which the umbrellas can be locked up are also furnished and of course mirrors are an indispensable necessity.

The telephone head-sets that the girls wear at the switch-board are also kept in individual compartments in a rack near the door of the room where the switchboard is. Each operator has her individual head-set.

In the larger telephone buildings quiet rooms are also provided for any who may become indisposed and wish to rest in quieter surroundings than are obtainable in the general sitting-rooms. These quiet rooms are equipped with simple medical supplies.

But it is the sociable sitting-rooms that form the gathering place for operators during the rest intervals and they are the center for what might be called the social life of the central office. At no time, probably, are these pleasant surroundings more keenly appreciated than at the Christmas season, when holly and mistletoe and perhaps a tree give a sparkling background to the Christmas dance. Then, and at the other operators' parties throughout the year, many of the telephone girls come to feel that in business life as well as in school and college life, some of the most lasting satisfactions grow out of the human relations that are established and the friendships that are formed.

"THE BISHOP MURDER CASE" FILMED AT LAST

Thrills Galore in All-Talking Adaption of S. S. Van Dine Best Seller—Picture Has Expert Cast

One of the many changes brought about in the moving picture industry as a result of sound developments is the present importance of the mystery-film as a form of entertainment. While the screen has had its "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and the art-cinema its "Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," movie-goers on the whole have not displayed an ardent interest in screen murders and mysteries. The coming of the talking film seems to have brought a decided change and now we have theatres packed with the showing of such thrillers as "Unholy Night" or "The Thirteenth Chair."

What accounts for the new demand Sound is believed to be the answer. While audiences of the silent film were only slighly stirred by the unwinding of film mysteries, the ability of the talking screen to achieve hair-raising screams, wierd sounds of tapping on a windowpane and other such uncanny noises which are fundamental requirements of a good mystery vehicle, has given them an entirely new character and fresh possibilities for "shocking" entertainment. It is said modern sophisticated audiences bored with almost every form of amusement now turn to thrillers as the only form of entertainment left which will give them a "kick."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer took the foregoing facts into consideration during the making of their lafest mystery-film, "The Bishop Murder Case," which movie-goers may expect to see at the Sequoia theatre on Tuesday. The new picture, an all-talking production, was taken from the book by S. S. Van Dine whose stories centered about detective Philo Vance have been sold to the tune of more than two million copies.

Basil Rathbone recently of the successful "The Last of Mrs. Chaney," was chosen for the detective role. Other members of the cast include Roland Young, drinker of innumberable whiskies-and-soda in "Unholy Night"; Leila Hyams of "The Thirteenth Chair"; Clarence Geldert of "The Thirteenth Chair"; Alec B. Francis, well-known char-after actor; George Marion, Zelda Sears and a number of others.

The plot of "The Bishop Murder Case" is built up carefully, steering clear of the old hackneyed situations and obvious devices. The film opens with finding of "Cock Robin" as he is familiarly known to a small group of friends, dead on an archery range with an arrow through his heart. Four men are immediately suspected. Sperling, against whom suspicion is directed by a jeering not couched in "Mother Goose" rhyme; Arnesson, a young scientist and lover of Belle Dillard; Drukker, an irascible hunchback, and Parr an irrascible hunchback, and Par-

The murderer, however, soon discovers that he was observed from the windows of the Drukker house. Drukker is found strangled in the park and Mrs. Drukker dies from heart failure, induced by fright. Johnny Sprigg, closest friend of "Cock Robin," phones Belle Dillard to meet him, that he has a clue, and he too loses his life, this time in broad daylight. Later Pardee is found dead over his chessmen. In all these cases notes are found in "Mother Goose," signed "The Bishop," and a black chessman is left by each victim.

It can be seen that the deaths of two of the principal suspects, Drukker and Pardee, greatly complicate the task of Philo Vance.

However, he uses plain logic to make clear a whole succession of baffling clues, and in the very last few feet of the film the "Bishop" is finally unmasked, with the help of a line from one of Ibsen's plays.

"The Bishop Murder Case" was adapted to the screen by Lenore J. Coffee. The production was filmed under joint direction of Nick Grinde and David Burton.

Sock Darning To Be Feature At Hobby Show

T. C. Walters of the San Carlos branch of the San Francisco Cat and Dog Hospital, will officiate as judge of the pet section of the Pet and Hobby Show, which is being put on for the boys and girls of Redwood City by the Yomecan Club tomorrow at the McKinley School.

Pets will be judged not from the standpoint of pedigree but from the standpoint of condition, cleanliness, and the care given by the boy or girl. Any kind of a pet will have a chance in the judging. Twenty different types of pets are included on the entry list. These include aquariums, chickens, dogs, birds, cats, pigeons, rabbits, ponies, squirrels, chipmonks, mice, turkeys, geese, ducks, ponies, miscelleneous pets.

One of the features will be the "Chum Stunt." A silver cup is awarded to the boy or girl with the pet which can do the most tricks.

For the boy or girl who is interested in collections and handicraft there are a large number of divisions. Of special attraction to the girls will be the needlework and domestic science sections. However, the girls will have to look to their laurels, for two years ago when a similar show was held it was found that a boy had made the best cake.

A special novelty feature in connection with the Pet and Hobby Show will be the sock darning contest for ladies fifty years of age and over. This event will start promptly at 3 p. m. Each contestant is to furnish her own materials. A hole approximately an inch in diameter will be darned. Fifteen minutes will be allowed for the competition. At the end of this time the lady who in the opinion of the judges has made the neatest darn will be awarded a silver cup.

The Yomecan Club, which is one of Redwood City's service clubs and which is made up of young men 18 to 25 years of age, insisted that although their major emphasis in service was for the girls and boys, nevertheless the mothers should not be forgotten.

All ladies of Redwood City and the vicinity over fifty years of age are urged to participate in this event.

Caswell Swett, Roger Lintner and Gordon Partee spent the Easter week vacation on a motor trip through southern California.

Police Arrest Five at Willow Street House

Five colored residents of Willow street were taken into custody Tuesday night, by a posse of Redwood City police, headed by Chief of Police Collins. The arrests were made at a Willow street house where the officers were looking for Bert Campbell, cook, and George Brooks, U. S. pensioner in connection with a bad check charge.

In addition to the two men wanted on the check charge they arrested Pink Hall, U. S. pensioner; Tom Constance, no occupation, and Katherine Saunders, housewife. These are charged with vagrancy, and were later released in court. Campbell and Brokso are being held in lieu of $1000 bail each.

WHO KNOWS?

An inspector was examining a class of boys in science, and receiving few answers to his questions. He asked one in a rather facetious manner, which drew an aside from a boy in the back row: "Silly ass!"

The inspector, seeing the boy's lips move, called to him encouragingly, "Speak up, my boy, you may be right."

Bible Easily Best-Selling Book

New York.—Fourteen million Bibles and Testaments were sold in the United States last year, according to statistics of the American Bible society and leading Bible publishers. The estimated total for 1929 purchases for the world is 3,500,000. Since October when the revised Episcopal Prayer book was published, 1,500,000 copies of the Prayer book have been sold, according to figures gathered by the National Association of Book Publishers.

Commenting on these statistics of Bible and Prayer book sales, Edward S. Mills, president of the National Association of Book Publishers, said: "The fact that the Bible is still the world's best selling book seems to disprove the contention of many that general interest in religion is on the wane. Another evidence of universal concern with religious problems is the large number of religious books issued by American publishing houses each year. Of the 10,187 new books and new editions issued in the United States during 1929, 806 were religious books.

"The only two groups which exceeded religious publications were fiction, which totaled 2,142, and children's books, totaling 931. Biography which is recognized as one of the most popular classes of literature at the moment, totaled 738 in 1929, 68 less than the religious book total. In the last five years 4,316 religious books have been published, and religious titles have been either second or third on the list of classifications each year.

It is interesting to note that in 1920 and 1910 religious books stood fourth on the list; in 1900 sixth.

"One reason for the large sales of Bibles is the modern church teacher's insistence on each member of the household having his own Bible. The old tradition of one family Bible is passe. A wide variety of editions and prices are now available—children's Bibles, reference Bibles, beautifully illustrated editions. A recent innovation in Bible publishing is the substitution of colored bindings, rich reds purples and blues, for the somber black which was considered the only suitable binding for so many years. Another striking change is brought about by the use of bold face type in some editions which is considered more readable than the lighter types.

"Books on the relation of religion and science have had large sales recently and books giving a spiritual interpretation of the universe are eagerly sought by the reading public. Biographies of religious leaders, books on the problems of the church in the modern world and on comparative religions are also popular. Many general book stores now have active departments specially devoted to the display of religious books, and a great many volumes are sold by the denominational stores throughout the country. There is a strong demand for books in this field during the Lenten season and for Easter gifts."

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By GRANT DIXON

Worried

A certain theatrical producer who is the proprietor of one of Broadway's more intelligent plays is worried these nights. He stands out front at theater time and watches his audience file in. "Too many high hats, too many high hats," he mutters. His philosophy is that a play that draws a high-hat patronage is doomed to a comparatively short run. "I'd rather see more people from the Bronx," he says.

Some Don'ts

If you are an out-of-towner in New York for a short visit, and have a limited amount of time to devote to showgoing, here's a tip: Don't buy tickets to the final performance of a big success. When a show has been running for a year or so, the final performance is, naturally, something that the actors look forward to with pleasure. It means a rest, or, if the show is going on tour, a change of scenery. So the last show is very likely to be hilarious. If a scene in the play calls for liquor drinking, real liquor may be used. If the show is a revue, the actors "ad lib" their lines, and sometimes aren't so funny.

I attended the last showing of one of the best of the revues the other night, and had a miserable time. The stars' friends were prominently seated down front, and they had a gorgeous time tossing pennies, bursting balloons and talking to the players. It was great fun for them and the cast, but nothing to pay $6.00 a seat for.

• • •

First Nighter

At a premiere performance the other evening a well known man about town, as the phrase goes, arrived under the theater marquee in his town car. He stepped out, and so did his chauffeur. The man about town gave the chauffeur a pair of tickets, and that menial strolled in to see the show His employer drove the car away.

• • •

Famous Men

In the electric lights over a playhouse featuring a musical comedy are usually to be found, in addition to the name of the show and the names of its stars, the names of those who wrote it. Thus, we may read: "By Rodgers and Hart," or, "Book by Herbert Fields."

After what happened the other day, I wonder if these credits to authors and composers mean anything to the general public. A reporter for a certain newspaper wrote a story about George Gershwin—a story which took it for granted that everyone knows who Gershwin is. The managing editor told the reporter he had taken too much for granted, and the reporter put up an argument.

• • •

Such Is Fame

To settle the dispute they agreed to interview the staff on the subject of Gershwin. Reporters, of course, were left out—for these gentlemen are pretty well informed. They asked the telephone operators, the office boys, the artists and the secretaries about Gershwin. Only one in six knew who he was.

One telephone operator said: "Sure, I know who he is. He's a violinist." An artist said: 'Why, he's a composer. He wrote 'Yes, We Have No Bananas.'" So it is my belief that the public doesn't care a hoot about names. It may remember that Jack Donahue is in one show and Fred Stone in another, but it can't be bothered with remembering who else appears, who produced the show, and who wrote it.

Postmen Test Leather's Durability

Washington.—Every one knows that a postman is hard on shoes, so when chemists in the United States Department of Agriculture wanted help in an experiment to determine the relative wearing qualities of sole leather tanned by different processes they asked postmen in Washington to wear the test shoes.

There are two common ways of tanning leather—vegetable tanning and chrome tanning. In recent years attempts have been made to combine the two methods so as to get the desirable qualities of each. The product is known as chrome retanned leather. To get data on the actual wearing qualities those in charge of the experiment had each postman wear one shoe half-soled with vegetable tanned and the other half-soled with chrome retanned leather.

Results of the experiment showed that the chrome retanned leather wore longer than the vegetable tanned leather, in some cases almost twice as long. Certain objections, however, were found to the chrome retanned leather. Leather tanned by this process absorbs water much more rapidly than that tanned by the vegetable process, and proved to be slippery on wet pavements. When chrome leather is heavily retanned its objectionable features are lessened, but in the experiment it was found that its wearing qualities were likewise decreased.

To insure accuracy in results six hides were divided into halves and the mated soles were cut from identical positions. The number of hours each pair of shoes was worn was carefully recorded. No waterproofing treatment was used for any of the leather which was employed in the experiment.

Will Bars Drinking by Heirs to Fortune

Los Angeles.—Abstinence from liquor and tobacco is the price the heirs of the late Francis J. Struck, of Los Angeles, must pay if they desire their share of his $100,000 estate.

"If any of my heirs become drunkards or marry drunkards, they will be cut off and their share will be divided among the sober ones," a codicil said. A warning against the use of tobacco was contained in another section.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Sparkling Eyes

Our eyes sparkle more at some times than at others. This is because, at the moment, the movement of the eyelid is stimulated by emotions. The eyelid serves as a "moistener" for the eye and when added stimulas causes the eyelid to move more frequently, more fluid is brushed over the eye, causing it to glisten.

MAKING LIFE EASY

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I visited Baker overnight not long ago. I have known him for a good many years—ever since he was a boy of eighteen, in fact—and I have watched his development with interest. He had little to start with, and his early life was one of sacrifice and struggle. He knew what it meant to work hard and to do without things.

Just now he is one of the well-to-do and influential men of his community, and life to him from the standpoint of the looker-on seems rather soft and easy.

Baker has a son; a strong, healthy, well-trained young fellow, who has just been out of college a year or two and who is working in his father's office.

"I'm taking Joe into the firm the first of January," Baker explained to me, "and he's going to have his name on our stationery. You see I've been working pretty hard for the last twenty-five or thirty years. I've made up my mind that in the future I'll let him and another young fellow I've picked up do most of the heavy work and I'll get the most of the money. I don't believe it is good to make life too easy for them."

I've watched the young people of today a good deal, and that is one of the greatest weaknesses in their training. Father and mother are determined in too many cases that life for their children shall be made as easy as possible. They have come up themselves to comfort and prominence over a hard and rough road, perhaps. They don't want their children to have the same experience, and so they coddle them and give them every luxury that can be bought, and so weaken them for the contest of life.

A woman came to see me a few months ago concerning her son who had been dropped from college because of inattention to his work. Her hands were rough, her clothing quite cheap and commonplace. It was clear that she earned her living by hard labor. The son on the other hand, was quite carefully clothed, his fur coat having cost some one a considerable sum. There was no indication on him of sacrifice or economy.

"I've worked hard," she explained to me. "I wanted my boy to have an education, and I did not want him to lack what other boys were having."

It was the easy time she was toiling to give her son, and in doing so she had ruined him.

I knew a very different mother, a woman of wealth and high social standing.

"When we sent our sons to college," she explained, and she had three, "we found out what the average student spent, and we gave our sons that amount, hoping to teach them reasonable economy." They had no automobiles, no fur coats, no luxurious living quarters all of which their parents could have easily afforded.

"We don't want them to have too easy a time."

Today they are stronger for this training which was given them.

Booklet Tells of Plan Safeway Merchandicing

A. H. Borland, manager of the Redwood City Safeway Store, received this week a pamphlet in which is set forth many facts concerning the concern which he represents in Redwood City. The pamphlet is issued by the Safeway Stores and sent to every employee of the great concern. As much of the information is important to the many customers and friends of the Safeway Stores in Redwood City, some excerpts are hereby reproduced:

In regard to the ownership of the organization it states:

The ownership of Safeway Stores is vested in its stockholders, who now comprise some nine thousand separate individuals, corporations, banks, trust companies, etc. In short the ownership of Safeway Stores rests with the investing public throughout the United States and Canada. Our stock is so widely scattered and so generally held that it would be impossible to name any one particular class who might be said to own Safeway unless we except those who are engaged in their actual operation.

Our records show that at the present time there are in excess of nineteen hundred employees of Safeway Stores who own stock in the company. As has been indicated, most store managers and executives in the employ of the company own from a few shares to a substantial block of its stock. All of these own common stock and many of them, in addition, own varying sized blocks of its preferred stock. These employees are scattered wherever Safeway operates and it may thus be truthfully said that the ownership of Safeway Stores is substantially represented in practically every town or community in which we operate.

Profits Shared

Briefly outlined, Safeway's plan of sharing profits provides that the store or market manager shall receive a salary of $30.00 a week, plus 30% of the net profits of the unit he operates. In the majority of instances these store and market managers are also stockholders and receive dividends upon their stock exactly the same as any other stockholder in the organization. Thus they not only receive a salary and almost one-third of the net profits of the stores or markets they operate, but by reason of stock ownership they also participate in the earnings of the organization as a whole. So far as we know there is no other concern in this business which operates upon a plan as liberal or as fair to all concerned. Many of our managers who have tried it frankly tell us that they can make a great deal more money working for Safeway, without a dime of their own money risked, than they could if they were operating for themselves with several thousand dollars of their savings invested.

Takes Local Interest

It is Safeway's fixed policy to belong to each chamber of commerce in the communities in which it operates. The dues paid are the same as those paid by any other merchant or business man and in the aggregate run into vast sums each year. In addition, Safeway customarily belongs to state chambers of commerce and is a member of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Further donations are made to community advertising campaigns, where these are of a state-wide or national scope. Figures are available for any who desire them setting forth the total, either by states or by communities, of Safeway's distribution of the monies set aside for participation in community undertakings, charities and civic enterprises.

Some idea of the amount of money spent by the Safeway organization is contained in the following figures:

During 1929, Safeway bought more carloads of fresh fruits and vegetables for cash than was shipped to the whole of New York state by the four states of Texas, Washington, Oregon and Arizona combined. Of itself this reperesents a substantial service and a material contribution to the prosperity of farmers, gardeners and orchardists in the various localities where these items were purchased.

During 1929 Safeway Stores paid rentals in excess of four million dollars, which money was distributed to property owners throughout the territory in which we operate.

Safeway Stores paid to public utility companies over one million, two hundred thousand dollars for light, water, gas, fuel, power, telephones and telegrams during 1929.

We bought insurance of all kinds during the past year, the premiums for which amounted to over one-third of a million dollars.

We paid to local delivery firms and drayage companies approximately nine hundred thousand dollars—almost a million.

During 1929 our purchases of office and store supplies (not fixtures) amounted to well over a half million dollars.

Just to keep clean linens on our store and market employees during the year, Safeway Stores paid out to local laundries over two hundred thirty-three thousand dollars.

Safeway's advertising bills during 1929 amounted to approximately one and one-half million dollars, practically all of which was spent with local newspapers and printing plants.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Thomas Heydenfeldt, who was called north on account of the sudden passing of his father, Thomas O. Heydenfeldt, left yesterday for his home in Santa Monica. Mr. Heydenfeldt is connected with the Douglass Airplane Co. of Santa Monica. He was formerly with the Ford Motor Co. in Detroit, Michigan, but had to return to California about a year ago on account of his health, which is now greatly improved. With his wife and three children he makes his home in Santa Monica. His brother, Roderick Heydenfeldt, travels for a large concern in Los Angeles. He was on a trip to Arizona, when apprised by wire of his father's death, and on Thursday night late took an airplane immediately for Redwood City, arriving here on Friday morning.

At the regular meeting of the Fraternal Aid Union Tuesday evening, delegates and alternates were elected to represent the local lodge at the state convention to be held at San Jose on May 3. The delegates elected are Mrs. Mary Winter, Mrs. F. E. George and Mrs. George McNulty. The alternates were John Burbank, F. E. George and Mrs. B. Barteaux.

Prof. Otis M. Carrington and family of Whipple avenue have returned from a week's motor trip through southern California. They visited the Misses Hattie and Sophie Nobs, sisters of Mrs. Carrington, the former at Orange and the latter at Bell. The two sisters are teaching in the south. The Carringtons also spent seevral days in Pasadena and Los Angeles.

The booster committee of Bay View Lodge of Odd Fellows will hold a dance tomorrow evening in the Odd Fellows hall. Music will be supplied by O'Connor's orchestra. J. A. Gibson is in charge of the arrangements.

A dance will be given tomorrow evening in the Masonic hall by the club room committee of Redwood City Lodge No. 168 F. & A. M. As at their dances in the past music will be supplied by the Barrett and Love orchestra.

50 YEARS AGO

Too much wet. The street crossings are in a horrible condition.

Local politics are getting hot and lively. There seems to be a sort of go-as-you-please scramble for the marshalship, which appears to be the most coveted office.

The Odd Fellows' picnic, at Turner Park, takes place a week from next Monday. The arrangements in progress give promise of a very pleasant affair.

The County Clerk is busy, with extra help, making out a schedule of mortgages on record in this county for the use of the assessor in making out the assessment role.

James Hannon has recently refitted, repaired and thoroughly renovated his saloon in the Times and Gazette building, on Main street, and it is now one of the most attractive and coziest resorts in town.

Bay View Lodge, No. 109, I. O. O. F., at its meeting of the 14th inst., elected P. G.'s George W. Fox and A. B. Fletcher as representatives to the General Lodge of California, which convenes for its annual session in San Francisco on May 11th.

Mrs. Devine, an old-time resident and ranch owner on the Summit, has leased her property there and is preparing to move to Bodie.

Metamora Tribe of Red Men, who expect an official visit from the Great Chiefs of the order on Monday next, will give their big visitors a reception at Germania hall in the evening. Music and dancing will be the order of the night.

Thiel, the jeweler, on Bridge street, continues to serve the public with everything required in his line. Watch repairing receives his personal attention, and is done intelligently and cheaply. Don't follow the practice of some of our public officials and send your work away to the city. Patronize home industry and help to build up the town in which you live.

The young men who annoy the congregation at the M. E. church, Sunday evenings, by smoking cigars and cigarettes in the vestibule, should resist from the habit, and wait until service is over.

RADIOS TO BE GIVEN AWAY TO SCHOOLS

Realizing the importance of radio in the school as well as the difficulties encountered by the schools themselves in their efforts to obtain such modern equipment, Mr. William L. Buckley, of Buckley Radio Service, with the co-operation of the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, has arranged to donate to each and every Redwood City school, one Philco "Balanced Unit" A. C. Radio, (choice of Lowboy or Highboy Console Model) complete with Cunningham Tubes and built-in Electro-Dynamic speaker.

This arrangement calls or one radio to be set aside for a school on the basis of ten radios sold by the Buckley Radio Service. There is no time limit, so that each school is assured that, sooner or later, its radio will be delivered and will immediately become the sole property of that school.

Mr. Buckley has put this in the form of a contest to determine which of the schools will be the first to receive its radio. He has placed a score-card in his store window and, as each radio is sold, the name of the customer will be placed in the column of the school specified by the customer. Thus, the school which is the first to have ten names or votes to its credit will be the first to receive one of these radios. Midget radios will count as half votes.

WOODSIDE

The Portola Social Club will give a card party on Friday night at the schol house in Portola. The proceeds will be used to purchase equipment for the club.

Much work has been done in the improvement of the Searsville Lake resort during the winter and all arrangements are completed for the entertainment of the public during the summer season. In addition to the swimimng and boating, there are beautiful picnic grounds and miles of woodland trails.

Mrs. Alanson Weeks and her daughter, Leone, have returned to the family home here for the summer. They will be here until August.

William Byrne held open house on Easter Sunday and was visited by many of his friends from all over the peninsula.

Under the direction of the Parent-Teacher Association and the district nurse, an opportunity will be offered on May 5th, for the medical examination of all children of a preschool age. This annual examination of the little children insures their starting on their school career under the best possible conditions. The examination will be held at the school between nine and twelve o'clock.

Preparations are going forward for the annual May Day celebration given by the school for the community. There will be the customary public parade followed by singing, dancing and games.

The interior of the Woodside church is being renewed with fresh paint and varnish. Services next Sunday will probably be held out of doors.

Robert Schurman and family have arrived for the summer from their home in Pasadena.

Mrs. Edward Wobber gave an Easter party to a number of her San Francisco friends at her home here on Sunday.

J. J. Harra and family are moving this week into the Hayes cottage on Miramontes avenue.

Barnes Circus Will Appear In Nearby Towns

The Al. G. Barnes Circus is coming to San Mateo April 28 and to Palo Alto April 29.

Advertising agents representing Al. G. Barnes Circus have posted pictorial bills in this vicinity announcing the coming of this popular show. Advertisements will be found in our columns this issue. The management of the circus announce the following new features:

Two gorgeous spectacles of Oriental magnificence entitled "Persia" and "The Pageant of Pekin," in which approximately one thousand people take part.

Miss Mabel Stark, outstanding animal trainer of the world, will send ferocious jungle-bred tigers through thrilling routines in the steel arena.

Sensational aerial and acrobatic troupes have been imported from Europe, and the Gretonas in their high-wire act will be a revelation to patrons of the Al G. Barnes Circus.

"Cherie" and her living models—thirty youthful girls from Hollywood—present graceful and artistic reproductions in white marble of world-famous masterpieces.

Miss Babe Letourneau, queen of gymnasts, will thrill with her aerial specialty from the dizzy heights of the white top.

A special congress of clowns has been gathered from the four corners of the earth.

These are just a few of the many new and improved features with the Al G. Barnes Circus for 1930.

Two performances are given daily at 2:00 and 8:00 P. M. The doors are open one hour early for the inspection of the biggest traveling zoo on earth and the signal wonders in the menagerie.

TWO CARS CRASH AT INTERSECTION

Two cars were badly damaged yesterday afternoon in a crash at the intersection of Brewster street and Broadway. One of the cars, driven by James McLaughlin of Menlo Park, was going west on Brewster street. The other car, driven by John Munday of this city, was going east on Broadway.

Munday escaped without injury, but McLaughlin received several cuts and bruises and had several teeth knocked loose. The accident was investigated by Officer Douglass of the Redwood City police department.

WONGS WIN IN ANCIENT RACE WITH CHIN CLAN

So Indicates the Latest Issue of San Francisco Telephone Subscribers Directory

There are 259,000 names listed in the new San Francisco telephone directory, A. A. A. Aback being the first name, and Miss E. Zyskind the last name.

The Smith family leads in the number of listings with second place belonging to the Johnsons and Johnsens, and the Browns and Brownes occupying third place. In famous Chinatown the Wong family which formerly held first place again leads, having passed the Chin family during the year 1929.

This new directory contains 1,188 pages as contrasted with San Francisco's first telephone directory in 1878 which consisted of but a single sheet of paper and contained only 174 names. By 1898 the number of Bell telephones in the state had increased to 30,000. This figure is now over 1,100,000.

One of the interesting facts in connection with San Francisco's local telephone history concerns the great fire of 1906. On the day before the disaster, San Francisco had 52,323 instruments in active service, while eleven days later, when the stricken city took stock of its remaining assets, but thirty telephones were found to be in use. Recovery, however, was rapid and in ten short weeks the number had risen to 12,078, a remarkable record for restoration of service after so great a catastrophe.

If Your Figure Needs The Utmost in Control

We recommend that you wear a Corselette* with an inner belt. The model that we show here is extremely popular, on account of its exceptional value, and perfect fit. Large figures can appear much more youthful—feminine modes of today are kind to the woman who has a figure, but, the curves must be perfectly controlled!

Warner's

MODELS FOR ALL TYPES

The inner belt featured in this Corsélette,* is a continuation of the elastic hip sections—it supports and controls excess flesh at diaphragm and abdomen, and the long lines of the outer garment smooth the silhouette down to lovely lines. The garment is well boned, and made of an attractive rayon patterned novelty cloth. There are detachable shoulder straps. Note the opening, part way under the arm, to assure a smooth bust line.
